"JACK THE RIPPER," the notorious perpetrator of the London Whitechapel butcheries, is said to be under arrest. He is a medical student, and his arrest was made on the strength of information given by his sister.

KISSES.

(A la Romeo and Juliet.)

A prominent physician calls the kiss "an elegant discriminator of disease." He says: "Lovers are spread by it, so are lung diseases." Out upon the ground and snoring husband! Evidently kisses are not for such as he, and the old fox says the grapes are sour. Let him devote himself to making our women healthy and blooming that kisses may be kisses. This can surely be done by the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, which is simply magical in curing diseases peculiar to females. After taking it for a reasonable length of time there will be no more irregularity, backache, bearing-down sensations, nervous prostration, general debility and kindred ailments. It is the only medicine for women, sold by druggists, under a positive guarantee from the manufacturers, that it will give satisfaction in every case, or money refunded. A book of 100 pages, on "Woman and Her Diseases, and their Self-Cure," sent, post-paid, to any address, securely sealed in a plain envelope, on receipt of ten cents, in stamps. Address, World's Dispensary Medical Association, 661 Main Street, Buffalo, N. Y.

Dr. PIERCE'S PELLETS

Purely Vegetable and Perfectly Harmless. Unexcelled as a Liver Pill. Small, Sugar-coated Pellets. One Day's Dose Cures Headache, Biliousness, Constipation, Indigestion, Malaria, Stomach and Bowels. 25 cents a vial, by druggists.

Repetitions in History.

Since 1872 each successive Republican administration has met with defeat in the elections for congress in the second year of its term. In 1872 the overwhelming defeat of Horace Greeley upon his manly and generous programme brought the Democratic party to a condition of demoralization and despair that had no parallel in the country's political history save in the breaking up of the Whig party in the election of 1852. The exultant Republicans believed that they need no longer reckon with the Democratic party as an adverse political factor, and they governed themselves accordingly in the administration of public affairs and in congress. But how wrongly they estimated the virility and recuperative power of the national Democracy, and the spirit of the American people was shown in two short years.

In the elections of 1874 the Democrats secured a membership of nearly two-thirds in the house of representatives, as well as control of most of the state governments. In order to counteract to as great a degree as possible the effect of this tremendous popular revolution the extreme Republicans in congress, led by General Butler, who was ranking under personal defeat, undertook to pass a force bill for dragging the southern people. This truculent partisan measure was defeated by the stubborn resistance of the Democratic minority in congress, aided by Speaker Blaine and a few other Republicans who keenly recognized that such a measure would do more harm to its authors than to its intended victims.

In 1878, in the midst of the Hayes administration, a Democratic majority was elected to the house as a popular rebuke to the electoral fraud of 1876. Apart from its fraudulent title there was little cause of complaint against the administration of President Hayes. The public finances were skillfully managed, and President Hayes himself did what was in his power to promote a conciliatory spirit among the people of all sections. Feeling that he held his high office by a dishonest tenure, he sought in every way to divert public attention from the sinister fact. But the elections of 1878 showed what the country thought of him and his party.

Again, in 1882 the Republican administration of President Arthur was struck by a popular cyclone in the middle of its term. The substantial Republican majority in the house that came in with President Garfield in 1880 was completely dissipated and replaced by a Democratic house as the result of the brief career of Speaker Keifer and his party associates. Yet the course of Speaker Keifer and the house over which he presided was moderation itself compared with the tyranny of a speaker and a majority who have ruthlessly trampled under foot constitutional law and the rights of representation, in order to accomplish their desperate partisan ends.

But the rule which has so exorbitantly pursued Republican administrations, did not repeat itself in the second year of President Cleveland's term. The wise, firm and patriotic course of President Cleveland, as well as the general policy of the Democratic party, had the approval of the people; and as a sign of it they sent a Democratic majority to congress in 1886.

And now the Harrison administration is approaching the popular test of an election in the second year of its existence. When the Grant, Hayes and Arthur administrations could not withstand this test, what is the prospect of a party loaded down with the McKinley tariff bill, the bozanza silver bill, and the threatened deficit in the treasury? The Davenport-Lodge force bill is in itself a confession that the Republican leaders dread to face the American people in the November elections unless they can play their game of politics with loaded dice. In the popular storm that is gathering, history promises to repeat itself in such a way as to startle the partisans who have wantonly trifled with the dearest interests of the country.—Philadelphia Record.

Sam Jones at Fort Worth.

Faith and work make a good life, but faith without work is entirely unproductive.

If you believe the Bible, pitch in and do what it says. Manifest your faith by your works.

Precepts are good, but examples are better. We need more examples and less precepts.

If you have a good wife, be good yourself. Don't try to get to heaven by your wife's apron strings.

Trust in the Lord if you starve to death. It is nothing but a high cut to heaven. Do right, if the heavens fall.

You may own 100 acres of land, but at the end of your life your possessions dwindle to a plot of 6x4 feet.

Trust in God, and do your duty whether you amount to anything or not. Don't be anything that makes you do as you oughtn't to do.

Fort Worth society may spread itself, but in Baltimore it would be invited to the kitchen.

Jealousy is danger in the family. Don't listen to what neighbors say about your husband unless your husband is present.

When you hear one of these fellows say "every man has his price," you can put it down that that man is for sale.

The best evidence of a scoundrel is when you find one of those old fellows that suspicious everybody else.

I don't believe in this long-faced Christianity. When my little Bob comes around me with a long face, I know that he is sick or has done something mean; I either dose him or switch him. You old long-faced Christians, one of the old "bark from the tomb" fellows. When I see him I always think "I would not live always, I ask not to stay."

If you have been lying, drinking and cheating widows, be solemn. Otherwise, cheer up, old fellow.

An old sister says: "Brother Jones you are too tight and funny. When I get dead I'll be more dignified. The more dignified a fellow gets the nearer dead he is."

Some folks think solemnity is purity. They are wrong, it is only a disease of the liver.

There's as much religion in laughing as there is in crying. I don't blame you for crying, if you have anything to cry about.

Dr. TALMAGE SAYS: "There is not one man or woman in 10,000 who can afford to do without seven or eight hours' sleep. All those stories written about great men and women who slept only three or four hours a night make very interesting reading; but I tell you, my readers, no man or woman ever yet kept health in body and mind for a number of years with less than seven hours' sleep. Americans need more sleep than they are getting. This lack makes them so nervous and the insane asylum so populous. If you can get to bed early then rise early. If you cannot get to bed till late then rise late. It may be as Christian for one man to rise at 8 as it is for another to rise at 5. I counsel my readers to get up when they are rested. But let the rousing bell be rung at least thirty minutes before your public appearance. Physicians say that a sudden jump out of bed gives irregular motion to the pulse. It takes hours to get over a too sudden rising. Give us time after you call us to roll over, gaze at the world full in the face and look before we leap."

LOUIS BERG, leader of the "Snare gang" at St. Louis, was struck on the head by Watchman Saunders at a tent revival meeting Monday night, and died Thursday morning from the effects of the wound.

CLIPPINGS.

The Gould building and the merchants' exchange at Dallas, Texas, were destroyed by fire, Tuesday night. Loss estimated at $1,000,000.

Every laborer, farmer, professional man and merchant in the West is injured by the defeat of the free silver bill, while to the man who has a mortgage on his farm the defeat of the measure is a real calamity. But the Republican party rejoices more over the prosperity of one Eastern bondholder and money lender than over that of nine hundred and ninety-nine who never had any bonds to hold or money to lend.

The regular periodical row between the opposing factions of the Republican party in this state has broken out again. Silk Stocking McCullagh is after the scalp of Hoodlum Pohlman, while Hoodlum Filley has a big club in hand and intently watches the hole in which McCullagh disappeared two years ago, and he will smash him as soon as he pokes his head out. It's a pretty little row and each deserves the hardest licks the other can strike.

Among the 1,800 convicts in the penitentiary are three preachers and two saloon keepers. Shoe makers outnumber any other trade. There are six brothers from one county. One convict is serving his eighth term, another his fifth term. A wooden legged man and a counterfeiter with artificial feet were among the recent discharges. There are quite a number of G. A. R. men, more than twenty of whom draw pensions from the federal government. There are but three ex-convicts who are convicts.

A casual glance at a newspaper will show a list of men who help to build up the town. If you see a good sized, live advertisement in the paper by each of the principal merchants, and a card from each of the small ones, you need not inquire about the prosperity of the town—it's solid. But if you find the most extensive merchant not advertising their business' then you set it down as a fact that those who do try to push their business and the town with its interests, have a hard time and an up-hill journey all the year round.

Our Grand Old State.

A few years ago, the State of Missouri was a wilderness and inhabited by the Red men of the forests. Today, it is the garden of the world, redolent with the fragrance of the orchard and vintage, teeming with the homes of thrifty people, pulsing with the vim and vigor of progress, and yellow with the bloom of an almost perennial harvest. It is a slice from the juiciest side of the earth and is becoming more valuable every year. Last year, this grand old state sent to the East, from her overgrown storehouses, a golden stream of grain filled hundreds of their empty trains with the choicest of herds and flocks, and, standing on the threshold of this year's bounty, she sends greeting and welcome to a half million of their sons, who would try their fortunes in her bounds. But Missouri is as yet in her infancy; what she will be in fifty years hence, is beyond the comprehension of the people now living. Her vast deposits of coal and iron, her great resources of mineral wealth and her rich and productive soil are just beginning to be developed and cultivated. The next decade will show greater improvements than since she was first admitted into the Union as a state, and she will be recognized as the garden spot of America.

A class of people are now heading toward Missouri who will develop her resources, and we bid them welcome.—Ex.

The Missouri fairs are no exception, as far as we have been able to see, to one general rule, they ask the newspapers to advertise them for nothing. It is not a paying business. The heart lends grace to every act, and the heart is all the heartier when it is being paid for its work. A public good, but the work on it has to be paid for and advertising is a part of that work just as much as carpentering or grading. If a good fair is expected it must be paid for, newspapers can no more live on wind than farmers.—Rural World.

The lark came forth to meet the sun and carol forth his lay, the farmer's son took down his gun and him blazed away. The busy bee arose at five and hummed the meadows o'er, the farmer's wife went for his live and robbed him of his store. The little ant rose early too his labors to begin, the greedy swallow flew that way and took his antship in. On birds and bees and ants, be wise, in proverbs take no stock, like men refuse to rise till half past eight o'clock.—Unchained Poet.

FAMILIES not already supplied should lose no time in procuring a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. It is the only remedy that can always be depended upon for bowel complaint in all its forms. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale by W. G. Agee & Bro., Dalton.
